Title

Existential challenges of a psychologist in working with involuntary dislocated people in Ukraine

Abstract for

Short Communication

Abstract

Description of phenomena in the experience of a psychologist in war conditions. Getting stuck in the role of a IDP as a consequence of resistance to accepting a changed life. The world in its new appearance is unfair, unsafe and absurd and there is a temptation not to accept it, to freeze and wait for when "life will become the same". Lack of interest in integration and development in a new place of residence.
